KARL ROVE – November 17, 2010

Called “the greatest political mind of his generation and probably of any generation” by Fred Barnes of The Weekly Standard, Karl Rove continues to be a major presence on the American political stage. Former Deputy Chief of Staff and Senior Advisor to President George W. Bush, today Rove is a Newsweek and Wall Street Journal columnist and Fox News contributor and author. Liberals love to hate him, but they cannot deny his keen intellect and understanding of American history and public policy.

NANCY GILES – January 12, 2011

CBS Sunday Morning contributor, comedian and actress Nancy Giles delights TV audiences with her social commentaries and theater fans with her solo pieces. On topics ranging from popular culture and body image to creativity and stereotype, Giles says, “I want to make people laugh and I want to entertain them, but I also want to provoke thought and discussion.” A commanding presence, she’s someone with something witty and compassionate to say to all of us.

DAVID BERMAN and JON WELLNER – April 27, 2011

Since its debut in 2000, CSI: Crime Scene Investigation on CBS TV has been one of the most popular television shows in both the US and around the world. Now, for the first time, the secrets of CSI are revealed as actors/researchers David Berman and Jon Wellner take you inside the hit forensic drama. Jon and David detail the exciting process of how each episode is created, from the stories’ conception in the writers’ room through post production and finally to your television screen.
